About John Cleese

On the small screen, John Cleese is known for his work on programs such as “Cheers”, “3rd Rock from the Sun”, “Will & Grace” and the Emmy®-nominated TLC documentary “The Human Face with John Cleese”. His film credits include “Silverado”, “The Out-of-Towners”, “Rat Race” and Kenneth Branagh’s “Frankenstein”. He also co-authored two best-selling books on psychology – “Families and How to Survive Them and Life and How to Survive It” – and served briefly as Minister of Defense in the John Major Cabinet. He recently completed his autobiography “So, Anyway...” which was described by the Daily Mail as “self-obsessed.” In his twilight years, John passes his time writing film scripts, giving speeches to business audiences, doing seminars on creativity, teaching at Cornell, paying alimony, and doting on three huge cats and a fish.
